- 1 In the summer of 1939 a German girl friend of mine went to Sweden to visit Selma Lagerlöf, to ask her to secure a sanctuary for my mother and myself in that country. Since my youth I had been so fortunate as to exchange letters with Selma Lagerlöf; and it is out of her work that my love for her country grew. The 5 painter-prince Eugen and the novelist helped to save me.

In the spring of 1940, after tortuous months, we arrived in Stockholm. The occupation of Denmark and Norway had already taken place. The great novelist was no more. We breathed the air of freedom without knowing the 10 language or any person. Today, after twenty-six years, I think of what my father used to say on every tenth of December, back in my home town, Berlin: «Now they celebrate the Nobel ceremony in Stockholm.» Thanks to the choice of the Swedish Academy, I am now in the midst of that ceremony. To me a fairy tale seems to have become reality.

In der Flucht
welch grosser Empfang
unterwegs –

Eingehüllt
in der Winde Tuch
Füsse im Gebet des Sandes der niemals Amen sagen kann denn er muss
25 von der Flosse in den Flügel
und weiter –

Der kranke Schmetterling

weiss bald wieder vom Meer – 30 Dieser Stein
mit der Inschrift der Fliege hat sich mir in die Hand gegeben –

An Stelle von Heimat
35 halte ich die Verwandlungen der Welt
